

Little Boarhunt Gatehouse, Portsmouth Road

Listed Grade II

House with a central through carriageway, which serves the driveway to Little Boarhunt: formerly cottages, but reconstituted in 1910 by Inigo Triggs as part of the larger scheme. Lower walls rendered, the upper tile-hung with exaggerated bellcast, the centre having an exposed timber frame (continued within the archway) resting on a brick base, the height for vehicles being achieved by cutting into the ground (which is above the adjoining road level). Tile roof, with end gablets above hips, which extend to a lower eaves. Three upper casements, one half-bay to the north side. Plain

Little Boarhunt (also Listed, along with its garden and some garden structures) was Triggs' own house, developed from the former Frys Farm. The entrance off the Portsmouth Road was originally much close to the Links (then the Wheatsheaf Inn).

The Listing description is wrong in at least two respects—no cottages were demolished here (they were confused with those demolished on Triggs' Hailey/former Rectory site); and the Gatehouse was built rather later than 1910 (in base, the height for vehicles being achieved by cutting into the ground (which is above the adjoining road level). Tile roof, with end gablets above hips, which extend to a lower eaves. Three upper casements, one half-bay to the north side. Plain

LEFT VIEW FROM A 1950'S POSTCARD

